Bernard Schiele, Ph.D., is Researcher at the Interuniversity Research Centre on Science and Technology, and Professor of Communication at the Faculty of Communication at the University of Quebec at Montreal, Canada. He frequently teaches and lectures in North America, Europe and Asia. He has been working for a number of years on the socio-dissemination of science and technology. He is a member of several national and international committees and is a regular consultant on scientific culture matters to governmental bodies and public organizations. He is also a founding member and current member of the scientific committee of the PCST network has organized the 1994 PCST conference in Montreal (Canada). His recent publications include : 'Science communication today' (CNRS 2012) (co-edited), 'Science communication in the world' (Springer 2012) (co-edited); 'Communicating science in social contexts' (Springer 2008) (co-edited); 'At the human scale' (Science Press 2006) (co-edited); 'Le musée de sciences' (Harmattan 2001); 'Science centers for this century' (MultiMondes 2000) with E. Koster. At the moment he is a member of the expert panel selected by the Canadian council of academies to assess the 'State of Canadian science culture'; he chaired the Scientific Committee of the last Hubert Curien Conference (Nancy [France] 2012); and was the former president of the of the International Advisory Scientific Committee for the Science Museum in Beijing. He received the 2012 ICOM Canada International Achievement Award.